

Heinz Says

UK Freshman Girls Are Taller And Fatter

The average UK freshman girl today is 1½ inches taller than her 1928 counterpart. She also weighs about 10 pounds more.

That's the word from Dr. Wilbur A. Heinz, associate in the UK Health Service. He recently completed a student height and weight study based on 30 years of UK health records.

His study shows that today the average freshman woman stands 65.1 inches and weighs 125.2 pounds, as compared to a median height of 63.6 inches and weight of 115 pounds in 1928.

While the girls in the freshman group showed a 2.3 per cent gain in height, they increased 8.8 per cent in weight. The average height of all women students in 1928 was 65.8 inches. Fifty per cent of them weighed 125.9 pounds or over.

UK men, too, are growing taller, showing a 3.2 per cent increase in average height over 1928 while 1958's average freshman weighed 22.3 pounds more.

Dr. Heinz cited the weight increase as "even more significant" than the fact that almost one-third of UK's male population is made up of six-footers.

A number of factors lie behind these height-weight trends, the report said:

1. Improvement in living standards.

2. Reduction in the frequency of serious illness during the growth period.

3. Decrease in the duration of illness during the growth period.

4. Effectiveness of health education efforts.

5. Increased knowledge and application of nutrition along with a greater abundance and variety of foods.

6. In general, better all-round health care.

The report said the increase in weight for both men and women is not a true trend, because a good number may be overweight. In the over-all weight picture, over-eating and lack of exercise may play an important role.

Congratulations

Taylor Jones Wins Campus Party Nod

By ALICE REDDING
Thursday Editor

Taylor Jones won the Campus Party nomination for the Student Congress presidency Tuesday night by a first roll call vote of 366 of the 513 voting members present.

Jones' nearest contender, Charles Cassis, received 135 votes, while Phil Cox received 19 votes.

Frank Schollett, in the absence of other nominations, was named the Campus Party's choice for SC vice president. Nominated by Dan West, Schollett's candidacy was seconded by A. W. Simmons, SAE, and Jim Miller, football houses.

About midway through the call for nominations, the motion was made by Sigma Nu that Schollett be accepted by acclamation. Permanent Chairman Tom Darnell declared the move out of order since the rest of the delegations had not had the opportunity to nominate.

Jones was nominated by Bill Kinkead, who attended the convention as an Independent delegate since he is a member of a fraternity, Phi Kappa Tau, which belongs to the Students' Party. He was elected to SC in the fall of 1957 on the SP ticket.

In his nominating speech, Kinkead, citing the Students' Party motto, "Merit Rather Than Affiliation," said he had decided to buck his party because he believed Jones "better merited" the nomination.

West, PDT, and Bill Campbell, SAE, seconded Jones' nomination.

In his keynote address preceding the nomination, Bob White called upon party members to "get behind the candidates and dethrone the strong-armed dictatorship which exists today." He pointed out "quite a few of their (SP) members are dissatisfied with the candidates they themselves helped to elect." The party's primary purpose this year, White said, is to "defeat the other party lock, stock, and barrel."

The keynote speaker was one of the founders of the Campus Party last year.

Keeneland Will Drop Counselors Next Fall

Keeneland Hall will abolish its counseling system beginning in September, Mrs. Lewis Harvard, head resident, said yesterday.

Holmes Hall, UK's new dormitory for upperclass women, has not had student counselors living on each floor since its opening in September.

Residents will be responsible for desk duty in Boyd, Patterson and Jewell Halls, as well as in Keeneland, Mrs. Harvard said. She said she thought counselors would be retained in the freshman dormitories.

The system used in Holmes Hall, where girls are assigned a certain number of hours per semester for desk work, will be put into effect in Keeneland, Mrs. Harvard said.

Mrs. Harvard said freshman halls will also require residents to work on the desk at night.

They will answer the desk telephone, call girls to the lounge to receive visitors and take messages.

Receptionists are on duty during the day in all women's dormitories.

In other action, the House Presidents' Council ruled Monday to begin senior women's privileges Monday, April 27. Senior women are given 11 p. m. permission Monday through Thursday nights the month before graduation.

Jane Walsh, president of the council, said there was discussion at the meeting that the senior privileges should be abolished.

She said the senior privileges have become a UK tradition and probably will continue. The House Presidents' Council, with the dean of women's acceptance, has power to write a permanent clause in the women's handbook, insuring senior privileges.

At present the action on senior privileges is taken annually by the council.

Our Pasture-ized Parking Lots

Whether by intent or accident, the University's parking lots—particularly Area R across from Donovan Hall—have added a touch of topographical nostalgia by simulating, in miniature, many of the areas of the Blue Grass landscape.

Surrounding Lexington, for instance, one may find fertile pasture land with picturesque ponds reflecting the sun's last golden rays. In the parking lots, one finds the same type ponds—with one small scenic variation: instead of purebred cattle mooing softly, these ponds are fringed by irate students griping loudly at the semi-amphibious area where they must park.

Also surrounding Lexington one will find outcroppings of the very limestone that makes the land so fertile. Reproduced on a smaller scale by small boulders jokingly termed "gravel," the parking lot surfaces are so rugged that driving across them causes almost as much injury to a motorist's nerves as it does to his new tires.

We are sure that every patron of the parking lots is thrilled with the topography of them, but the thrill has worn thin along with students' tires. Since each person who registers to use the parking areas pays a $5 fee, some of which is supposed to be devoted to maintenance, we would like to suggest that the University fill in the ponds and smooth down the gravel (?) "Badlands" before erosion gets too firm a grip on them.

Or, if graveling is impossible, let's rope off the areas, conjure up some rain, watch them erode, and then sell tickets to see Kentucky's only replica of the Grand Canyon.

This Is Area 'R's' Well-Gravelled Surface.

Gold-Digging Coeds

To The Editor:

Your editorial yesterday referring to the increasingly dominant role played by women in American society ("Pop's Not Too Important") touched upon a point that has been irking me so much of late that I had to make some comment about it.

You spoke of the mother's influence in determining the child's education and the fact that mothers are so busy piddling around with clubby activities that they are "tired." I agree with this, but when you brought the "emasculated male" into the picture I think you neglected one of the more important points: the reason why the male has lost his position as head of the family in far too many cases.

Just look around you at the coeds on campus. About 97 out of every 100 are here not to get an education, but to latch onto a male who will provide them bed, board and—hopefully—mink. Most women are, in fact, so vacuum-headed and materialistic that they go after their little goals with a ferocity and selfishness that defies description.

Thus the poor male, if he wants to exhibit one of these creatures as his "own lovey-dove," must alter his goals to correspond with theirs. The big urge among women is for comfort and security and, ultimately, Chippendale furniture and Tiffany bracelets. This, of course, entails money. And to get money, a male has to either inherit it or work like a dog to make it, just so he can hand it over to the little woman—who in turn either lavishes it on herself or on such items as will make her appear more successful in the eyes of the Joneses (who are trying to outstrip the Smiths, who are madly racing with the Browns).

Women, you see, control and spend some 80 per cent of this country's wealth. The fact that a male loses control of the family reins is unavoidable as long as they (women) hold the purse strings.

Since no other methods have succeeded, I would suggest one sure cure for the current dilemma, and it is a simple remedy: allow no women in colleges, take away their right to vote, don't let them hold any public office and, in short, do anything necessary to keep them in the home, where they belong, and out of the male's rightful domain.

If that doesn't work, beat the blue living hell out of them!

Much Ado About...

John L. Lewis And The UMW

By GURNEY NORMAN

The United Mine Workers have done much good for coal miners in Eastern Kentucky. Before the advent of John L. Lewis and the UMW, coal miners were virtually at the mercy of their employers, who grossly under-paid them for back-breaking labor and necessitated a virtual slave existence for their workers by "causing" them to live in company-owned houses and trade at company-owned stores, not unlike the old South's plantation system.

The UMW changed all that. Through an organized effort, the employers were forced to treat their miners humanely if they wanted their coal dug. Living standards went up. Hospitalization and retirement benefits were made available to all UMW miners.

So for a time coal was the prime fuel for industrial and commercial use. But, the unions kept demanding higher wages, which, for a while, they deserved. To meet their workers' wage demands, operators in turn raised the price of their coal. Around and around the cycle went, until coal was priced out of the range of many former users. These users exposed themselves to other fuels, and liked them. So down went the economy of Eastern Kentucky, an area almost exclusively dependent on the coal industry. Only World War II and the Korean War prevented the decline from coming sooner.

Now, Eastern Kentucky is one of the few regions of the United States that did not at least show signs of recuperating from the 1958 "recession" that hit the country, but which was generally regarded as ended by last fall.

For an organization that historically has professed to exist in the interest of the working man, Lewis' UMW has caused a highly ill-timed strike. Coming at a period when unemployment is at a dangerous peak, at a period when a whole area's economy is virtually on the snapping point, the current UMW strike has only made worse a bad condition.

It is said the UMW has a large reserve fund to care for its striking members. Mutual support is one of the virtues of organized effort, but what of the thousands of non-unionists who are being physically prevented from working by threat of physical harm, coming from scores of pickets lined up outside their small mines? The large mine operators, who employ hundreds of men, and their striking employees, can perhaps sustain themselves until they come to reconciliation. It is the operators and workers of the small, 10-man independent truck mines who are suffering.

Eastern Kentuckians, despite their apparent economic distress, are quite proud people, and a far cry from the rifle-toting stereotype that ignorant observers hold them to be. With every reason for pessimism, there is an area-wide optimism that in the not too distant future industries will be attracted to their area by the abundance of ready labor and potential natural power and resources. But it is quite possible that this flicker of hope for a promising future for their land has been dealt a damaging blow by the very strike now in effect, brought on by the United Mine Workers. For this strike has caused violence and many disreputable actions that could easily scare off an industry interested in locating in the mountain area.

At present, a shaky calm hangs above the strike scene, thanks to Gov. Chandler's mediation. But with one man already dead, coal tipples burned and dynamited, mobs throwing workers from their work places, and the state militia on the alert, it makes the prediction of a nineteenth century philosopher seem startlingly clear. Who was it that said the working class will one day rise up and violently overthrow its labor "oppressors?" Some fellow named Marx, I believe.

The recent trend toward livening up church services by featuring jazz combos may necessitate a sweeping revision of hymnals. To keep up with the modern motif, titles may have to be changed slightly, e.g., "The Rock-and-Roll of Ages" and "Jesus Loves Me, Cha Cha Cha."

Campus Party Seeks More Car Privileges

Extending campus privileges to sophomores with automobiles and making Alumni Gym available to students until 10 p. m. highlight the 10-plank Campus Party platform adopted Tuesday night.

The installation of conveniently located phone booths on campus was also supported by the party to enable students to make calls quickly and easily.

The party called for an investigation of dining facilities at the Donovan and Jewell Hall cafeterias.

A campus bank where students could borrow money, make deposits and conveniently cash checks, and no-profit, student-owned bookstore were included in the platform.

The Campus Party pledged itself to favor freedom of the press in all University publications and to work for the encouragement of school spirit and the creation of campus traditions.

Another plank called for an improved advisor system, including a plan for more out of class help for students needing assistance in difficult courses.

They also want a stop light placed on the corner of Woodland and Columbia Avenues at the side-walks completed in Cooperstown.

The platform was unanimously adopted by voice vote.

In the preamble, the platform said the party was founded because it "felt there was a strong need for a two-party system and a Student Congress more interested in promoting the welfare of all students." The party would continue to work for a "more active and efficient Student Congress," the preamble said.

First Double-Flasher Light Installed At Intersection

Lexington's first double-flasher light was installed yesterday at the intersection of Columbia and Woodland. It was erected in an effort to reduce accidents, J. M. Heidenreich, city traffic engineer, said.

The Cooperstown Council investigated the move through Dean of Men L. L. Martin. A traffic survey was taken by the city Tuesday and the traffic fell short of the necessary number which warrants a traffic light.

Heidenreich said, "At least an average of 750 cars an hour must make approaches from all angles before a traffic light can be installed. The city conducted a traffic survey Tuesday and only 500 approaches were made hourly."

The survey was taken between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. when traffic is generally considered heaviest.

Heidenreich said, "We recognize there have been numerous accidents at this intersection, but most of these have resulted from inattention on the driver's part. In most cases cars failed to stop coming from the Woodland side."

He said the new lights will give drivers more of a target value and the hope that drivers will observe the signals more than they have in the past. "The former caution light apparently was not doing the trick," he said.

Heidenreich said, "The new signal is unique and installation of such a light is rare, but I feel it will improve traffic conditions at the intersection."

The signal includes two flashing amber lights facing Woodland traffic and a double red flashing signal facing Woodland traffic.

VIVE LE POPCORN!

The other day as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (Marlboro, incidentally, has the best tinfoil, which is not surprising when you consider that they have the best cigarettes, which is not surprising when you consider that they take the best filters and put them together with the best tobaccos and rush them to your tobacco counter, fresh and firm and loaded with smoking pleasure). The other day, I say, as I was walking down the street picking up tinfoil, (I have, incidentally, the second largest ball of tinfoil in our family. My brother Eleanor's is bigger—more than four miles in diameter—but, of course, he is taller than I). The other day, as I was saying, while walking down the street picking up tinfoil, I passed a campus and right beside it, a movie theatre which specialized in showing foreign films. Most campuses have foreign movie theatres close by, because foreign movies are full of culture, art, and esoterica, and where is culture more rife, art more rampant, and esoterica more endemic than on a campus?

Nowhere; that's where.

I hope you have all been taking advantage of your local foreign film theatre. Here you will find no simple-minded Hollywood products, marked by treacly sentimentality and machine-made bravura. Here you will find life itself—in all its grimness, its poverty, its naked, raw passion!

Have you, for instance, seen the recent French import, Le Crayon de Mon Oncle ("The Kneecap"), a savage and uncompromising story of a man named Claude, whose consuming ambition is to get a job as a meter reader with the Paris water department? But he is unable, alas, to afford the flashlight one needs for this position. His wife, Bon-Bon, sells her hair to a wigmaker and buys him a flashlight. Then, alas, Claude discovers that one also requires a leatherette bow tie. This time his two young daughters, Caramel and Nougat, sell their hair to a wigmaker. So now Claude has his leatherette bow tie, but now, alas, his flashlight battery is burned out and the whole family, alas, is bald.

Or have you seen the latest Italian masterpiece, La Donna E Mobile (I Ache All Over), a heart-shattering tale of a boy and his dog? Malvolio, a Venetian lad of nine, loves his little dog with every fibre of his being. He has one great dream: to enter the dog in the annual Venetian dog show. But this, alas, requires an entrance fee, and Malvolio, alas, is penniless. However, he saves and scrimps and steals and finally gets enough together to enter the dog in the show. The dog, alas, comes in twenty-third. Malvolio sells him to a vivisectionist.

Or have you seen the new Japanese triumph, Kibutzi-San (The Radish), a pulse-stirring historical romance about Yamoto, a poor farmer, and his daughter Ethel who are accosted by a warlord one morning on their way to market? The warlord cuts Yamoto in half with his samurai sword and runs off with Ethel. When Yamoto recovers, he seeks out Ethel's fiancé, Red Buttons, and together they find the warlord and kill him. But, alas, the warlord was also a sorcerer and he whimsically turned Ethel into a whooping crane. Loyal Red Buttons takes Ethel home where he feeds her fish heads for twenty years and keeps hoping she'll turn back into a woman. She never does. Alas.

WILDCAT
PAUL SCOTT

A new club is in the process of being formed here on the campus. Dave Franta, UK pole-vaulter, asked that all men or women interested in SCUBA diving meet with him at the Coliseum Pool at 9 Saturday morning. If any student has any basic SCUBA equipment* (snorkel tube, flippers and mask), he requests that they bring it along. Franta said for those interested, who don't have the equipment, get in touch with him at Allen House, in Cooperstown, or call 4-2118.

The club is being initiated in order to cut down the cost of acquiring supplies. A club of this type can purchase equipment cheaper and Franta is hoping to set up an air station (to supply oxygen for tanks).

The club would also set up a standard procedure for training divers. Franta pointed out that several people have been killed recently because they did not possess the necessary SCUBA know-how.

Franta cited an example of a Mansfield, Ohio, man who narrowly escaped death in Florida because he had not fully been instructed in the art of SCUBA diving. His tank ran out of air when he was working 30 feet underwater and he barely made it to the surface.

Franta and Gene Florence, a former deep sea diver and Navy UDT instructor, are planning an underwater project in Seneca Caverns in Southern Ohio, late in May or early June. They plan to add two additional experienced divers to aid them in a search for dry caverns.

Franta said they will have to wait until the water recedes before undergoing the move. The water at Seneca must drop to the eighth level before diving operations can begin.

It will certainly be an unusual and interesting venture in underwater diving and I wish Dave a lot of luck in making the club a success. Knowledge in this type of adventure seems pertinent and a requisite.

Former UK cross-country runner Austin Pyles recently won the 1959 Petaluma Marathon run in Petaluma, Calif. Austin covered the 26-mile, 385 yard course in three hours and four minutes, which is considered good time for such an event.

Austin ran against some of the top marathon runners in California. The 25th annual event was held April 5 and was sponsored by the Petaluma Spartans Athletic Club. Pyles is from Bedford.

Austin has been training under Mihaly Igloi, one of the top track coaches in the world. Pyles dropped out of school last semester to run under the Hungarian coach.

The deepest oil well drilled in 1900 was about 3,000 feet. In 1950 the deepest well went down more than 20,000 feet.

Four Good Reasons Why

Here are four good reasons why Kentucky's baseball team has been experiencing a winning season. Ron Bertsch and Dickie Parsons, holding bats, are the two top hitters. Bertsch is hitting at a .417 clip and Parsons is hitting .357, and leading in the RBI department with 12. Jerry Sharpe, in pitching motion, is 3-0 on the season, which included a no-hitter against Tennessee last week. Jon Zachem, in fielding position, is UK's top gloveman. The Ashland first baseman has made 76 putouts without an error.

Bertsch Leads Cat Hitters;
Sharp Is Top Moundsman

After 13 games UK's Ron Bertsch is still pacing all Wildcat hitters with a very respectable .417 average. Dickie Parsons leads in RBIs and Jerry Sharp owns the best pitching record.

Thus far this season the Cats have experienced a successful season, winning eight and losing five. Their SEC mark stands at 3-2. This record includes a pair of wins over Georgia and a win over Tennessee. The Cats also lost games to the Bulldogs and Volunteers.

UK had a three-hour workout yesterday and emphasized hitting and fielding. It was the first good workout the Cats have had in over a week. Rain and cold weather brought the diamond sport to a near standstill and the sun was a welcome sight to both Coach Harry Lancaster and Assistant Coach Abe Shannon.

The Cats have been preparing for an important two-game series coming up this weekend in Nashville, with the Vanderbilt Commodores. A sweep of the series would put UK in an advantageous position in the Eastern Division of the SEC.

Bertsch, who has been to the plate 36 times with 15 hits, has the club's only two circuit clouts. The Bellevue native has driven in nine runs.

Parsons, the Cat shortstop, has been plateward 56 times with 20 hits for a respectable .357. The Jerry (no-hit) Sharp has won three and lost none in three tries. The Brooklyn, Miss. transfer has worked 31 1/3 innings and given up only three earned runs for a fantastic 0.86 ERA. Sharp ranks fourth in hitting with a .333 mark. Bob Linkner is third with a .341 average.

Big Jon Zachem, who holds down the initial sack, is the top defensive Wildcat. Zach has made 76 putouts without a miscue. Zachem also swings a consistent bat, which has been good for a .250 average and 10 runs batted in, second best on the team.

Jim Host is still plagued by bad luck. The Ashland native lost another tough one Friday, 5-3. Host only gave up one earned run.

Host has worked 38 innings, given up 14 runs, for a 1.41 ERA. Host leads the club in strikeouts with 37. The amazing thing about it though, is the righthander's record. It stands at 1-4.

As a team UK is hitting .297 and fielding at a .945 clip. The Cats have scored 78 runs, to their opponents 51. The pitchers own a 2.43 earned run average.

Blind College Wrestler Is Consistent Winner

BOONE, N. C. (AP)—Appalachian State Teachers, long a power in small college wrestling, added a new wrinkle this year—a blind matsman.

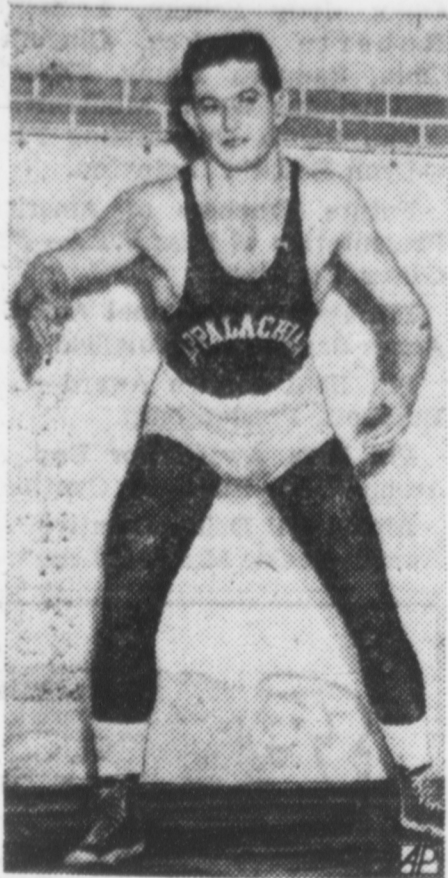

Freshman Donald Cox of Staunton, Va., totally blind since the age of five, has been a consistent winner. He helped the Apps preserve their two-year unbeaten record by winning his first four matches.

Three of those victories came on decisions. In the fourth, the 19-year-old, 167-pounder pinned his opponent.

Don's high school coach, a friend of Appalachian Coach Red Watkins, told the youngster about the App's fine wrestling record and physical education department. Appalachian has won the Carolinas AAU title 19 years in a row.

Cox expects no favors from opponents because of his handicap and he receives none. "They give me just as hard a time as they do anyone else," he says. "They try to get me off balance by moving around, but I can counter."

Cox is a good student. He requires no special coaching. He makes use of recordings for his courses and Braille helps him in mathematics.

COX

Glaucoma, an eye disease, struck Don when he was two. His sight was restored temporarily, but total blindness overtook him when he was five. He plans to study physiotherapy and hopes to teach in England after graduation.

Buffalo Cabbie Lives Hard When Cards' Musial Slumps

By GERALD MILLER

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Life isn't all baseball glory, astronomical salaries and varied business interests for Stan Musial.

If you don't believe it, just ask Stan Musial himself, a 28-year-old cab driver who lives in the shadow of his famous namesake on the St. Louis Cardinals.

TIPS ON TOGS BY "LINK"

"I COULD HAVE DANCED ALL NIGHT" (with permission of "My Fair Lady") but I wasn't dressed correctly—I was one of those that thought dressing formal was square—well, I soon learned that I was a "square in the social circle"—in fact I was so conspicuous in my non-correct attire—I looked like the well known 'Fly in the Buttermilk'—never again — my motto now is — if I am going to a formal—I will go formal, as I have had the course !!!

CHALLIS—and foulard lovers—will be glad to know that "After Six" has put out some really keen looking cummerbund and bow-tie sets, for summer formal wear—also the popular cross over tie can be gotten to match the set—

MR. SHARP—(this week) is Joe Rudo, saw Joe, in an outfit that was a swinger—blazer coat of pearl grey—light weight—that had these features—silver metal buttons—was three buttoned with high peaked lapels and hacking pockets—dark grey (almost black) featherweight sport slax with the new dapper waist band—plain front and slim taper legs (not pegged) and of course true of the "Continental" fashion—they were cuffless—British tab shirt of pale grey and tie of blue, grey and black broad stripe enhanced above rainment—add soft grey socks and black square toed slip-on shoes—then—with his "Continental" designed raincoat (or rather utility coat) knee length and an oyster shade—you have "Mr. Sharp"—I mean like, like —

"Oh, I get kidded about having the same name," says Stan (not The Man), "and most of the time it's fine."

"But it's not funny getting phone calls at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning—'How's your batting average?' How come you didn't hit so good today?"

"These are the kind of questions I get before the caller laughs and hangs up."

Pressure from phone calls and from his passengers mounts during the season, especially from passengers on the way to the local ball park where the Buffalo Bisons play.

Musial says many who notice his name on the cab license are apt to question him closely about Stan (The Man) apparently convinced he must have some special knowledge.

The grimmest part of the coincidence is that Musial, the cab driver, has little interest in Musial, the ballplayer, and none at all in baseball.

"I guess I couldn't even answer those questions I get on the phone in the middle of the night," he says.

Provine won the 12-pound shot put. He threw the sphere 42'7½". Bill Seale threw the discus 113'8½" to win that event for PKA. Gip Setzer, PDT, was second.

Baker threw the javelin 140'6" to win that event. The Delt's Freddie Hynson finished second to give his fraternity the top two places.

The I-M office announced Tuesday that softball is underway and the first round has been completed. Second round play starts tonight.

Any student wishing to enter the wrestling event, which will begin Tuesday, may come to the I-M office and sign up. Students will weigh in the same day. There will be both individual and team matches. Weigh-in times are 3-5 p.m.
